Bending Iron

A hot metal iron is used to bend the ribs in violin making. The profile of the iron is equivalent to the waist of the instrument. In the past the iron was heated by embers while today is equipped with a thermostat and heated electrically.

back