

Middle Bout

In violin making, the two C-like forms of the string instruments are called Middle Bout, which also designate the narrowest part of the instrument body. For this reason it is also known as the C-Bout.